HEALTH & SAFETY

There are some things we just don't compromise on.

When it comes to Health & Safety at City & County Graphics, we simply don't compromise – whether that's of our staff, of our clients and your contractors, of your customers or of the general public. The size and style of the signs we manufacture, the high quality materials we use and the often high-traffic locations in which we install them, could create the possibility of causing injury if they were not installed to the highest possible standards – and set to withstand additional strains of high winds or adverse weather conditions. We take every precaution available to us and we will not take a project on if asked to take shortcuts – we are not just protecting the public, but your brand and reputation as well as ours.

We use structural engineers to calculate wind loadings, ground conditions, and the suitability of materials being suggested, fixings etc. Their reports give us the necessary peace of mind during both manufacture and installation.

We back this up by sending one of our management team to check that the engineers' reports are being followed on-site; we record the findings and hold regular 'tool box talks' with all staff to keep information flowing. Health & Safety also means keeping our staff trained and up to date with the latest regulations and recommendations, site instructions and client expectations. To this end, all of our site staff have CSCS cards, some at supervisory level, some at temporary works supervisory level and certificates are held for mobile elevated work platforms, tower scaffolds, CAT scanners, NRSWA, SMAS etc.

A zero-tolerance to risk

We will, and sometimes do, turn work away from clients who are not prepared to take Health & Safety as seriously as we do. Sometimes there are cost implications when, for example, a structural engineer insists on larger posts, or more posts, or additional fixings and some clients occasionally cannot see the benefit of those additional safety features. Unfortunately the failure to acknowledge those benefits is sometimes only seen when it is too late...

Working with City & County, you can be assured that your installation complies – every time.
